Brides on the run!

On the agenda: Brides Run at Lake Shore Park, 808 N. Lake Shore Drive, 773-272-5363; bridesrun.com

Check it out if you ... want to look even better in your wedding dress, need a good way to relieve some of the party planning stress, like running but not enough to be part of a hardcore group.

The details: Started in January by a bride-to-be looking to lose a few pounds before her big day, Brides Run offers free 10-week running sessions for brides and their bridal parties. Meeting at 8 a.m. every Saturday, the casual runs include 15 minutes of stretching and about 45 minutes moving leisurely along the lakefront, alternating between running and walking depending on the abilities of the group. Routes change weekly, often taking participants past shops that cater to brides or particularly picturesque spots they might want to keep in mind for wedding photos. The next session starts Saturday and registration is required, though people are welcome to register later. Runs take place weekly, regardless of weather, but may be moved to a later start time or different location, so make sure to call or check the Web site for details.

The payoff: Sweating off some weight instead of sweating your wedding day.

The people you meet at a social networking gathering might use Internet speak you're not familiar with. Sure it's geeky, but RedEye's here to keep you in the loop. ZAK STAMBOR FOR REDEYE

ASTROTURFING

A fake grassroots effort to generate interest in a particular product or service. In context: It turns out Jim didn't just discover a new gizmo; he's astroturfing it for a PR firm.

Comments: Just like the horrendous playing surface that forced Cubs great Andre Dawson to undergo 12 knee operations, astroturfing can often cause more damage than it's worth—if people find out.

DASHBOARD

The administration area on Web platforms that allows users to post, upload files, manage comments and check other people's posts.

In context: When I saw her reblog something that I wrote on my dashboard, I knew she was into me.

Comments: If you spend too much time looking at your dashboard, you might miss out on what's breezing by outside.

In real life

In context: I'm a teacher; what do you do IRL?

Comments: There's a good chance that a person who actually uses these three letters while speaking doesn't get out in real life very often.

TROLL

Someone who, for some unknown reason, is both obsessed and annoyed with every single one of your posts. In context: Whatever I write about Lollapalooza, this troll who has been plaguing my site for months will pick it apart. Comments: Definitely not as whimsical as a Troll doll. Chances are you won't be seeing any trolls at meet-ups since they're not interested in conversing IRL.

Too cool for the Internet

Online insiders using social media to connect in the Windy City

By Zak Stambor

FOR REDEYI

Of course social networks are social. But generally they're social in a sitting-in-front-of-the-computer-at-work or still-wearing-pajamas-and-it's-3 p.m.-on-a-Saturday kind of way. Not so much real people in the real world.

But that's starting to change.

With Web sites such as Tumblr, Twitter and Blogger encouraging users in Chicago and nationwide to move their online relationships into the real world at bars, clubs and restaurants, social media are about to become a little more ... um ... social.

Twentysomethings such as Jessi Langsen, a 25year-old public relations senior account executive from East Village, are turning to the sites to help them connect with people they otherwise might never meet.

"If I can find someone who also wants to take a cooking class, likes the same music that I do and lives in my neighborhood, why wouldn't I?" she said. "I'm a social person, so I'm always meeting new people. And if you're going to be meeting new people this speeds up the process a bit."

Langsen says she has met and befriended nearly a dozen people since she began interacting with people on Tumblr, a social media site that allows users to post text, images, video, links, quotes and audio to a short-form blog.

Each relationship has followed the same path.

"You find yourself going back-and-forth in comments, and then you send them an e-mail as a natural way to say more about their post. They e-mail back, you exchange your real names, then you begin wanting to move the conversation into real time," she said.

The relationships have exposed Langsen, a self-described foodie with unique musical tastes,

From posting to parties

Meet-ups weren't part of David Karp's plans when he founded Tumblr in 2007. Karp, 22, founded the site as a way to share things he found funny or cool or interesting. And he wanted to be able to do so without hammering out a multipleparagraph blog entry.

"I'm not particularly verbose," he said. Rather than create a large, empty text field, like most blogging platforms, Karp inserted six buttons to allow users to click on each to post text, images, video, links, quotes or audio.

The site allows users to "follow" other users and see their posts together with others' on their dashboards. The online relationships that develop from following someone and being followed are why meet-ups are a logical progression for a site that is a hub where nearly 1 million people share intimate details about their personal lives, Karp said.

"With this type of platform it's expected that people share so much about themselves and who they are online," he said. "With that you build up not just friends but fans online and going to a bar to meet is as much a thrill as it is to go to a venue to see a band."

to a slew of new restaurants and bands, as well as enabled her to form real-life friendships with people across the country.

One such friend, a Boston freelance writer and social media marketer, has evolved from a fellow Blogger user and Tumblr acquaintance to someone Langsen has met up with seven times in the past year and whose opinion she sought when she began a new relationship.

"In some ways these people are closer to me than my friends from college because they choose to read what I post," she said.

But not all real-world relationships develop so organically. Many, if not most, develop through meet-ups—casual gatherings advertised online where users meet to eat, drink and mingle. The gatherings, which are often advertised and organized by users (who, if they're using Tumblr, notify the site in order to receive free name tags and other Tumblr-branded swag). They can draw anywhere from a handful of people to more than 60.

To date, there have been three official Tumblr meet-ups, participants told RedEye. Chris Micek, a 24-year-old Web designer from the West Loop, NETWORKIN' IT What do you do when you can't find a bar scene in your neighborhood? Import your own. That's what Andy Czysz is doing in the South Loop these days. The 24-year-old Printer's Row resident helped launch a Facebook group called Guerrilla Gay Bar South Loop Chicago this year as a way to bring a fun bar atmosphere to the South Loop. As the page explains: Participants all agree to attend a venue on a particular night, and with enough participation the place effectively becomes a gay bar. Czysz says the group has organized five GGB events since January. The most recent one, at English (444 N. LaSalle St.), drew about 300 people, Czysz says. "It's a much more inclusive atmosphere than most bar scenes because you get this weird mix of crowds. People kind of know each other because they might have seen each other on Facebook." JIM WALSH, REDEYE Greg Carroll (left) and Andy Czysz hang out during the Guerrilla Gay Bar South Loop Chicago meet-up last week at English. ANDREW A. NELLES FOR REDEYE attended a recent one.

Like many of the attendees at the April event, Micek came by himself. While at first the lack of a natural crutch made him feel awkward, that feeling ceased after he began recognizing people he knew from Tumblr. Speaking to someone you know a little, yet have never actually met, is somewhat surreal, he said.

"It felt like meeting a random person at a bar—only you know what to talk to them about because you already know what they're interested in," he said.

It also can be about meeting a potential flame.

Greg Brown, a 22-year-old University of Chicago student who has been on Tumblr since 2007, found an online crush when someone he followed reblogged something that a girl had posted. He found the post witty and checked out her profile. Her posts, he said, were "goofy, silly, poking fun at herself," and it didn't hurt that she was cute. When she reblogged something he had posted, he knew she also was noticing him.

So when he found that she planned on attending the Windy City meet-up, he made it a point to go. They talked for a good portion of the night, but whether the relationship goes further, Brown isn't sure. But it could.

"The stigma of meeting people you meet online is being completely shattered," he said. "It's basically normal now. It's not creepy or weird like people thought it was five or 10 years ago."

Rules of engagement When you're meeting online acquaintances for

When you're meeting online acquaintances for the first time, you have to be careful not to cross the line. And that line isn't always clear. Here are some tips for interacting with people you've known online, but not in the real world.

ZAK STAMBOR FOR REDEVE

NOTHING WRONG WITH A DRINK TO GET THINGS STARTED

Sure you may have been trading insights about your favorite bands with Ted since you both signed up for Tumblr in 2007, but you've never actually spoken. So it may be awkward. A little social lubricant could grease the wheels of conversation.

DON'T GET TOO NOSY. THESE ARE STRANGERS, AFTER ALL

You wouldn't ask someone how much money she makes if you just randomly met her in a bar. Same goes for people at a social networking meet-up. Follow all the rules of small talk that you would in any new social setting.

KEEP YOUR OPINIONS (AT LEAST SOME OF THEM) TO YOURSELF

While you may have your thoughts on how Emma's boyfriend mistreated her, remember, you've (most likely) only heard about the situation from what Emma has chosen to share online. So if it seems like a messy situation, don't offer your take.

BE CAREFUL ABOUT TAKING PICTURES

Some people at meet-ups are sensitive about keeping their social media and professional worlds separate. Before you post a picture of Andrew wearing a grass skirt and lei after his seventh margarita, make sure you ask him if he minds.

What's hot this weekend

PAIR IT

Peanut butter and jelly: so kindergarten. Wine and cheese: so typical. Upscale chocolate and craft beer? Now that's a pairing we can get behind. Snag a spot at Beer & Chocolate Night at Drinks over Dearborn (650 N. Dearborn St., 2nd Floor 312-337-9463) to try six brews paired with Vosges Haut Chocolate candies at stations throughout the River North store. Pairings selected by beer expert and founder of World of Beer blog Stephen Beaumont include: Le Coq Imperial Extra Double Stout (Harvey & Son, Ltd.) with Vosges' Jazz truffle and Bourbon County Stout (Goose Island Brewery) with a sea salt truffle. Beaumont will be on hand throughout the evening to answer questions.

Crawfish heads at McGee's Headsucker's Ball

Though the name leaves a bit to be desired (we could do without the sucking visual, thanks), you're guaranteed to leave with a full stomach after the 20th annual Headsucker's Ball at McGee's Tavern & Grille (950 W. Webster Ave. 773-868-8073). Your $20 cover gets you a stake in the more than 2,000 pounds of fresh crawfish that McGee's is flying in from Louisiana, the world's largest harvester of the freshwater crustacean. Suck 'em down solo or in gumbo, jambalaya and red beans while listening to live zydeco from Hurricane Gumbo at 2 p.m. and Louis & Scharpf at 8 p.m. Get there early; the crawfish supply is expected to run out by the early evening.

Your unadulterated pet love

Sure, the first street fest of the summer means prime outdoor boozing, but the folks behind Chicago Mayfest (Ashland and Barry Avenues 773-665-4682) have a few other tricks up their sleeves—namely the annual pet parade. Bring your pooch or kitty to Mayfest's pet bash and compete for prizes, catch a trickfilled performance by Popeye and Sweet Pea dog show and snag free "doggy bag" giveaways. Once your pup's nice and pooped, dance the evening away to performances by local cover rockers Maggie Speaks and Mike & Joe. And you know, drink outside! When: 11 a.m. registration; party starts at noon Sunday; festival runs 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday Cash: $5 fest admission

Susie Essman's standup 'Hood: Old Town

If you tend to think of Susie Essman when you hear some overbearing wife flinging f-bombs at her husband, you'll want to snag tickets to one of Essman's two shows Sunday at Zanies (1548 N. Wells St. 312-337-4027). The comedian best known for playing Susie Green, meanie wife of Larry David's manager (played by Jeff Garlin) on HBO's "Curb Your Enthusiasm." flexes her comedic skills here for one night only. We secretly hope she throws down some old-school "Crank Yankers" action with her curse-laden rants.

When: 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Sunday

Cash: $30 plus a two-beverage or two-food-item minimum

'Hood: Ravenswood

While Chicagoans geeked out over the recent rise in local brewing thanks to Metropolitan Brewing and Half Acre Beer Co., they almost missed the quiet opening of Koval Distillery (5121 N. Ravenswood Ave. 773-295-4454) earlier this year. Well, stay in the dark no longer. Head to binnys.com to scoop up organic vodka, pear brandy, rose hip liqueur and other boutique mixers made by the husband-wife team. Owners Robert and Sonat Birnecker started the business in the name of Robert's distilling Austrian grandfather and meticulously grow their ingredients inhouse-hence the organic label. What are you waiting for? Toast to the weekend in style. Cash: $29.99-$37.99 per bottle

Wrigley Rockit launch

By Matt McGuire

The scene: It's easy to get distracted when discussing Trump International Hotel & Tower. After all, The Donald is more fun to talk about than all that glass and steel. Same goes for the new Rockit outpost in Wrigleyville. Co-owner Billy Dec—He blogs! He does fashion shoots! He's helping Chicago get the Olympics!—is infinitely more fascinating than burgers and beers.

However, all that gossip isn't going to help you make a decision about your weekend morning. We'll focus on brunch.

Rockit has been a runaway hit in River North, so it makes sense for the upscale sports bar to try its hand in the city's sportiest neighborhood. Open since the end of April, the new spot has added a kid's menu and tweaked its design to fit the smaller space (former occupant: Tuscany). Its attitude about everything else, from the menu (genuinely upscale pub grub) to the interior (sporty lodge that has a passing interest in rock 'n' roll), seems to be, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Dec and his partners at Rockit Ranch Productions know how to handle a crowd, which should prove invaluable when managing a spot that's a stone's throw from Wrigley Field. Sidewalk seating is tucked alongside the building on Waveland Avenue, a safe distance from game-day crowds swarming on Clark Street.

The culsine: Rockit is better known for solidly executing familiar favorites than blazing new paths, and that's certainly the case on its brunch menu. There's a short stack of buttermilk pancakes ($9), corned beef hash ($11) and steak and eggs ($12) served with a veal skirt steak. For the lunch-minded, there's turkey chili ($4-$6), a couple of meal-sized salads ($14-$15) and Rockit's famous kobe beef burger ($19).

The King ($12), which takes inspiration from Elvis' love of fried peanut butter and banana sandwiches, is the menu's sweet standout. The thick-cut French toast (perfectly fluffy) is drizzled with peanut butter, topped with whipped cream and toasted peanuts, and served with sliced bananas. It's an over-the-top dish that would seem right at home on the Bongo Room's menu, and like its namesake, it deserves its own cultish following.

The otherwise-solid California omelet ($12) would do well to replace its warmed avocado puree with a guacamole garnish, and the seasoning on the oven-roasted potatoes (announced as hash browns on the menu) could use a bit more kick.

MAY 16, 2009 I REDEYE 11

By Greg Kot

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Perhaps the only thing more unlikely than releasing a rock opera in 2009 is that it's a rock opera written and recorded by Green Day. But such is the case with "21st Century Breakdown," which arrived in stores Friday.

Green Day is that rare beast: a band that still sells lots of albums in an mp3obsessed, iPod era. And rarer still, the band makes albums that demand to be heard as a whole: a collection of conceptually linked songs that is greater than the sum of its parts.

The northern California trio's previous album, the 2004 release "American Idiot," was a song cycle about life during wartime. In the grand punk tradition of Reagan-era stalwarts the Minutemen, the Meat Puppets and Husker Du, Green Day succeeded in making an album that spoke to and about its generation at a time of political anxiety, fear and anger. Unlike those bands, Green Day was an unmitigated hit. During a decade when CD sales plummeted, "American Idiot" sold nearly 6 million copies domestically and 12 million worldwide.

Now comes the even more ambitious "21st Century Breakdown," nothing less than a three-part rock opera that traces the story of two characters, Christian and Gloria, the yin and yang of singer-guitarist Billie Joe Armstrong's personality.

Christian is a rabble-rouser with his finger hovering on the self-destruct button. Gloria is an idealist with hopes of remaking the world.

TV 'Jim Jefferies: I Swear to God'

9 p.m. Saturday, HBO

The Australian comic alternately charms and offends the audience in his first full-length HBO special, railing against Pandas ("[Bleep] 'em. Let 'em die off."), Christians ("You're wrong.") and people who don't get drunk ("No one gives a [bleep] that your kids don't have bruises!"). With jokes about AIDS, atheism, South African gay bars and burn victims that nearly cross the line, Jefferies' stand-up sermons are challenging. But once you forget political correctness, you'll be a convert. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

A psychic tells Peter Griffin that in a past life he was a 17th Century English gentleman named Griffin Peterson, who founded the colony of Quahog in America after he was torn from his great love, Lady (Lois) Redbush, by the jealous—and short—King Stewart III. As if the time-traveling main

ALBUM 'Divided By Night'

The Crystal Method

Electronic music stalwarts The Crystal Method have crafted a fine fourth album with "Divided

By Night." It retains their signature dancefloor-infused cadence while displaying a new sense of musical and lyrical urgency. The Crystal Method knows just when to pick up the pace, and on songs like "Double Down Under," they add some dirty deconstructed sounds effects to invigorate the melody. RON HARRIS, AP

GAME

X-Men Origins: Wolverine Xbox 360

What makes "Wolverine" good is the sick thrill of tearing a virtual person in two. What makes "Wolverine" bad are the awkward gameplay sequences that run counter to the character's ethos. Stealth sections and "Tomb Raider"-style puzzle-solving just bog down the action. And you face off against the same enemies over and over again, just skinned or animated differently. Out-and-about options in Chicago

Situation: I want to make the most of my limited outdoor space. Solution: Start a container garden, decorate an outdoor room or set up a grill station.

We Chicagoans love our decks, balconies, patios and roof gardens. Our summers are brief but beautiful, and we appreciate every warm day. Even if you've only got a tiny terrace, start decorating it now so you'll have all season to enjoy it.

The best times to buy outdoor furniture are the months that bookend the beginning and end of the season—look for discounts in May and September. For cheap deck gear during the rest of the year, overstock.com, Cost Plus World Market and that old standby, IKEA, have inexpensive options. Since Chicago's warm weather is short and sweet, you'll get more mileage out of your furniture if you buy things—like dining chairs, cafe tables or glazed ceramic planters—that can live a second life indoors or fold up for storage over the winter.

Urbanites like container gardening, since it allows us to grow plants and flowers without a lot of land. Use a mix of planters with adequate drainage—window boxes, hanging baskets, glazed pots—to grow anything from herbs to azaleas. Farmers markets and grocery stores are a great place to buy plants on the cheap, while big box retailers like Home Depot and Lowe's carry affordable shrubs and trees.

For summer barbecues, a grill station is essential. Charcoal grills, like the classic Weber, never seem to go out of style. If you don't have the space for a full-sized grill, most companies now make smaller portable models.

Here are a few options for a small deck or

RUDO Y CURSI

Goal! 'Rudo y Cursi' delivers

Half-brothers Tato (Gael Garcia Bernal) and Beto (Diego Luna) take their rivalry to the big leagues when both score a slot in the world of professional soccer. Lest success come too easily, each loses focus on the game, as Beto struggles with a gambling problem and Tato dates a shallow TV personality and tries to become a singer.

The buzz: It's great to see Garcia Bernal and Luna reuniting after Alfonso Cuaron's extraordinary 2001 road movie, "Y Tu Mama Tambien." Perhaps "Rudo" will offer a sense of deja vu, since Cuaron produced and his brother, Carlos, who co-wrote "Tambien," wrote and directed.

The verdict: Cuaron doesn't have a lot for Tato and Beto to do; they're often passive participants in their own lives, with the movie offering little soccer action and way, way too many voiceovers from the guys' manager about how the game is a metaphor for life. (Women are like soccer balls because they have to be taken care of and need attention, etc., etc.) The movie, though, is a watchable breeze, elevated by the rapport between Garcia Bernal and Luna that blends love and competition into one indistinguishable family bond. The movie's funny, a little frustrating—you'll predict the climactic on-field event long before it happens—and a perfectly pleasant take on the revolving door of fame.

Big acts rocking bargain ticket prices

By Alice Truong

Recession got you down?

Well, if you have five bucks in your wallet, you can cheer up because you've got enough for a concert ticket—and not just a ticket to an unknown band hoping to make it big by performing in small venues. Promoters are offering deep discounts this summer to entice music fans to come out to concerts. One marquee promoter, Live Nation, has worked with artists to reduce ticket prices, said Mark Campana, president of the company's Midwest region.

Since instating these efforts five years ago, Live Nation has seen ticket sales increase each year,

The current economy might play a role in increased sales of discounted tickets, but Campana said it is more likely due to people becoming smart shoppers and actively looking for deals.

Here are three highlights of upcoming summer concerts in Chicagoland where tickets are available for less than $25:

Daily grind Chicagoans ditch the office, flock to coffee shops

By Alice Truong

When George Strader's wife calls to ask which office he's at, she's really asking which Starbucks

Instead of his Arlington Heights office, Strader, 28, can be found at Starbucks locations throughout Chicago four days a week, sipping two grande-sized cups of coffee while getting work done on his laptop.

"The traditional cubicle and I do not get along," the advertising consultant told RedEye recently in a Lakeview Starbucks, steps from his home. "Everything I need is at my fingertips here: coffee, laptop and electrical outlet."

Coffee shops have taken on a new role in recent years, becoming a pseudo-office where freelancers type away furiously on their laptops next to half-empty coffee cups. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' most recent data, in 2005, 10.3 million people—or 7.4 percent of the work force the U.S.—have alternative work arrangements, which includes those working from home to those plopping themselves at coffee shops during the workday.

Because some set up shop for hourslong blocks at coffee houses, baristas are put in a difficult position trying to please displaced customers who can't find seats during high-traffic times.

"People walk out because there's nowhere to sit," said Jeremiah Muhammad, 37, manager of a Lakeview Caribou.

But Muhammad says he never asks those busy at work the passive-aggressive question: "How long are you going to be here?"

Such a question, Muhammad says, can be bad for business, especially since he prides himself on developing a relationship with Caribou regulars, many of whom are on a first-name basis with him.

The same problem exists at Noble Tree in Lincoln Park. With the permission of Noble Tree's owner, Jelly Chicago, a group of freelancers and students, meets twice-weekly in the coffee house, everybody working on independent projects.

"We're colleagues effectively," said Sean Johnson, 28, of Rogers Park, one of the founding members of Jelly Chicago. "But none of us are working on the same thing."

While the environment is social, regulars say it helps yield results in their work.

"There are so many distractions in the apartment," said Jeff Siarto, 25, a Web designer from the Loop. "I'm more productive here."

A place of their own

While some coffee houses are friendly to freelancers, Sam Rosen, 23, of Ukranian Village, said many don't feel welcome.

That's why he created the Coop. When he moved out of his Fulton Market apartment, he decided to keep the place and transform it into a working space. Half of it became an office for his Web design company, and the other half became the Coop, a coworking facility where freelancers and others can rent out a work space by the day, week or month. Because many "co-workers" are in related fields, such as Web development, it's common for strangers to help each other on different projects, Rosen says.

Even though Brett Yates, 29, is a self-employed Web developer who lives north of Millennium Park, at the Coop he can work among colleagues, he said.

"It's cool to be in a place where they encourage collaboration between people. ALICE TRUONG, REDEYE

Shaun White chats it up with RedEye

By Ryan Smith | FOR REDEYE

Known for his big air and bright red hair, Shaun White is an extreme sports machine. At only 22 years old, he is an Olympic gold medalist, Winter X Games superstar and the go-to guy for endorsements right now. RedEye caught up with the skateboarder and snowboarder for a phone interview in advance of his appearance at the Journeys Backyard Barbeque in Orland Park on Saturday, RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

What do you think of Chicago? Is there any Chicago landmark vou'd love to skate or snowboard on?

It's funny because the first time I came to Chicago, I was so surprised because I thought it was going to be sort of a dirty city, but it actually was really clean and really cool. I think if I was going to skate on something, it would be awesome to skate on that giant mirrored bean thing [in Millennium Park]. Of course, I'm sure I'd get kicked off in like five seconds.

You have your own snowboarding video game. Do you like playing it, or is it boring to you because you can say, "Hey, I can do all of that stuff in real life?"

I play the game all the time because we try to mix it up with some things you can't really do in real life. You can set off an avalanche in the game and you want to board as close as you can to it to score more points. I probably would never try that on the slopes if I wanted to make it out alive.

You've had lots of different nicknames, including "The Flying Tomato." Which is your favorite?

I've been hearing "Animal" from "The Muppets" lately and I've been digging that one because he is pretty cool. Animal was chained to his drum set because he was so crazy. I like it.

Is your hair central to your skill? If you cut it, would you lose all of your powers?

It's almost feeling like that. Whenever I get it trimmed, I feel like something is missing. It all started back in grade school because it seems like every single kid cut their hair short and spiked it. I was like, ugh, that doesn't look good. So I thought to myself that I was going to be the complete opposite and grow mine all long.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redeyechicago.com/answers.

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7letter words get a 50-point bonus. "Blanks" used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 3rd Edition. Find the answer at redeyechicago.com/answers.

RedEye quizzes the Magic 8 Ball about potential celeb happenings

Kim Kardashian is totally getting married—just not right

At least that's what the reality TV diva told people. com last week when asked about what her plans are with her guy, Reggie Bush, whom she's been dating since 2007.

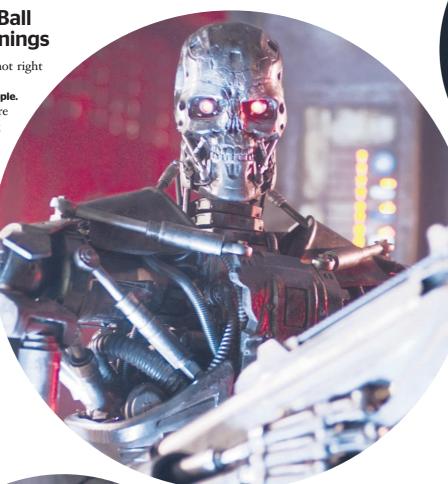

"I mean I think that it's in our future," she told the mag. "We've been together two years, but we are taking our time and I think hopefully this one will last because of that. We're just totally dating and normal and happy and there's no rush."

Of course, only time will tell how serious Kardashian is about getting hitched. But any time a celeb starts talking about the future, we use it as an excuse to break out the handy Magic 8 Ball in the RedEye office. Here are few other celeb questions that have been plaguing us lately-along with Magic 8 Ball's response and our comments.

What can we expect from Conan O'Brien when he takes over the 'Tonight' show in June?

RedEye's take: If by "yes" you mean "awesome," we're totally on board.

How cool is 'Terminator' going to be?

RedEye's take: If Christian Bale yells half as much as he did on that recording a while back, it is certain that this will be an awesome summer flick.

Is this 'Jon and Kate' thing ever going to let up?

RedEye's take: Are you sure, Magic 8 Ball? The scandal could mean higher ratings for the TLC show.

Jason who?

As Melissa Rycroft prepares to square off against Gilles Marini and Shawn Johnson in the "Dancing with the Stars" finale, the "Bachelor" dumpee marvels at how quickly her life changed.

"Eleven weeks ago, I was sitting in my cubicle doing PowerPoint presentations," Rycroft tells usmagazine. com. "I don't think anybody could have scripted that I was going to be here."

Of course, with instant fame come rumors—the craziest, said Rycroft, who was dumped by bachelor Jason Mesnick before joining "DWTS," was that she was posing for "Playboy."

"Not true," she said. "My father would kill me."

Melissa Rycroft and partner Tony Dovolani are gearing up for the "Dancing with the Stars" finale.

Pink hearts Hart

Sounds like Pink and her husband, Carey Hart, are a couple again. The "So What" singer tells Ellen DeGeneres that she gets a kick out of singing her hit song, which has strong words for her former ex. "He's in the audience so when I sing, 'He's a tool,' now that's my favorite line," she said, according to people.com excerpts.

Home wreckers?

More details are out on LiLo-gate. As RedEye reported Thursday, police are looking into an attempted burglary at Lindsay Lohan's Hollywood home. (When they first investigated, they thought it was just messy—not ransacked.) On Friday, usmagazine.com posted a statement from police that said one suspect wore a baseball cap and the other a bandanna when they tried to enter the home.

Underwood's homecoming

Carrie Underwood is heading back to the stage on "American Idol." The Season 4 winner will perform Motley Crue's "Home Sweet Home" on Tuesday as the show comes to a close and Kris Allen and Adam Lambert compete for the title of American Idol, latimes.com reports.

Kate's cut

Kate Gosselin (right) may be caught up in a marital scandal, but at least she's got a desirable 'do. "It's my attitude! Everybody wants it," the "John & Kate Plus Eight" star tells Entertainment Weekly of her spiky, asymmetrical hairstyle. "I have asymmetrical hairstyle. "I have very, very thick hair, so it's not going to work for everybody."

Zack coming back?

Sign up Mark-Paul Gosselaar for that "Saved by the Bell" reunion Jimmy Fallon has been pushing. Gosselaar, who played high school hunk Zack on the 1990s teen series, told RedEye on Friday that he and Fallon have "something good cooking." "I don't want to give too much away, but I'm doing his show June 8," Gosselaar said. "I'm not going to do the standard interview, I'll put it that way."
